Key findings

- The paid_search channel experienced high simulated cost per session anomalies throughout the week, with values reaching as high as $47.17 on 2021-01-30. This channel recorded 0 purchases and a 0.0% conversion rate despite a simulated spend of $351.84.
- Referral revenue saw a notable decline of 76.5% compared to the previous week, while organic_search revenue fell by 82.4%. These two channels accounted for the largest absolute decreases in revenue.
- The overall conversion rate for 2021-W04 was 1.2%, representing a 13.8% decrease from 2021-W03. Total sessions for the week were 26,342, a 4.1% decrease from the prior week.

Things to check

- Investigate the tracking implementation to determine why 71.0% of purchases had no revenue recorded. Verify if the 240 purchases missing revenue are concentrated in specific channels or transaction types.
- Review the simulated spend and performance for paid_search, as the channel recorded 0 purchases despite a simulated spend of $351.84. Check if the high simulated cost per session values are related to technical tracking errors or bidding strategy adjustments.
- Examine the traffic sources for the 29.6% of sessions currently categorized as unknown. Determine if recent changes to site tagging or referral headers could be contributing to this classification.

Δ is the change versus the previous complete week. Conversion rate = sessions with a purchase / sessions.

Paid channels SIMULATED SPEND

Channel	Spend	Δ	Cost per session	Δ	CPA	Δ	ROAS	Δ
Paid search	$351.84	▲ 7.2%	$19.55	▲ 1996.6%	-	-	0.00	▼ 100.0%

The GA4 sample has no ad spend or ad clicks. Spend is simulated (seeded), and sessions stand in for clicks, so cost per session is reported instead of CPC. For costs an increase (▲) is unfavourable.

Charts

Funnel steps count sessions. A step can exceed the previous one because a session can start checkout with a cart filled in an earlier session.

Anomalies

15 anomalies were detected in 2021-W04; the 8 most severe are listed. Seasonal notes give possible context, not causes.
